

RADON

Approximately 16% of lung cancers in Canada are related to radon exposure.

When you breathe in radon gas some particles can settle in your lung tissue and begin to decay. As the radon particles decay they release bursts of energy that can damage the lung tissue cells. Over time the cell damage can lead to the development of cancer.